About the Younger Members Group

Our Younger Members group is a non-profit group committed to increasing the awareness of the community and students of all ages about civil engineering in our area and across the world. On a professional level, we provide career guidance, technical development, and networking opportunities to engineering students and young professionals in the St. Louis regional area. Younger Members have had opportunities to volunteer for Operation Food Search and Rebuilding Together in the past, as well as engage with K-12 and college students at events hosted in schools and during Engineers Week.

Additionally, our group provides funds for two Younger Members to attend the ASCE Central Region Younger Member Council (CRYMC) conference every year. At this conference Younger Members, Section and Branch members, Institute leaders, and students build leadership skills, network with civil engineers from around the country, and gain knowledge of how to further advance the civil engineering profession through ASCE. The next conference is being held in Cleveland, OH, and we are hoping to provide funds for at least two Younger Members to attend.

Based on the enthusiasm and suggestions from our outstanding members, we are fundraising to provide a means to keep up with these leadership and volunteer opportunities as well as provide additional opportunities to serve in the St. Louis area. Funds raised will also be put toward demonstrations for booths at engineering awareness, professional development events, and social events.
